Ultrasound

IGO has several state-of-the-art ultrasound machines and highly trained sonographers to provide top quality ultrasound services. Pregnant women typically have an ultrasound performed at the first prenatal visit, around 12 week's gestation, as part of their non-invasive prenatal screening and again at about 20 weeks to review the fetal anatomy. All ultrasounds are reviewed by our IGO physicians. Additional ultrasounds may be performed later in pregnancy to evaluate for fetal position and fetal size, amniotic fluid, and other indications. We have 3D ultrasound capabilities and have partnered with Mobile Baby to provide low-cost photos that are digitally transmitted to an email or text address so that patients may share the images with their family and friends.
